The Sculptors of Mapungubwe is as great a book as all of Zakes Mda's. I have read his Memoir and Black Diamonds. I came out of all his books fulfilled and confident that South African literature is alive and well. The book relates the story of the son of the Royal Sculptors, Chats and Rendani.

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe by Zakes Mda - Goodreads

In the timeless kingdom of Mapungubwe, the royal sculptor had two sons, Chata and Rendani. As they grew, so grew their rivalry—and their extraordinary talents. But while Rendani became a master carver of the animals that run in the wild hills and lush valleys of the land, Chata learned to carve fantastic beings from his dreams, creatures never before seen on the Earth.

Ageless and contemporary, deceptive in its simplicity and mythical in its scope, The Sculptors of Mapungubwe encompasses all we know of love, envy, and the artist's primal power to forge art from nature and nature into art. Mda's newest novel will only strengthen his international reputation as one of the most trenchant voices of South Africa.

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe is not a strictly historical novel -- Mda's concerns and interests are as much in the characters, and specifically Rendani and Chata's roles as artists -- but Mda does provide an interesting introduction to this generally thriving but also fragile kingdom. Part of the global marketplace of the time, it attracted traders from far away (mainly because of the local gold, but also, more problematically, because of foreign interest in rhino horns).

His novel, The Sculptors of Mapungubwe (2013), is the latest stage in his larger fictional project of imaginatively mapping southern Africa. In a narrative that draws on different epistemological realms and modes of storytelling, Mda recreates the physical and human geography of the precolonial Kingdom of Mapungubwe in Limpopo, its social hierarchy, cosmogony and historical context.
